A prophylactic role for HLA-G in ovarian carcinoma. HLA-G is a non-classical major histocompatibility complex (MHC) class I molecule. It is expressed in a variety of normal tissues and in most cancer types. Previous studies have suggested that HLA-G is involved in tumour immune escape. We have studied the expression of HLA-G in normal and malignant ovarian tissues from patients who have undergone a staging laparotomy. The expression of HLA-G was markedly up-regulated in ovarian cancers compared with normal tissues. HLA-G was expressed in 52% of ovarian cancer cases. There was an increase in the proportion of highly HLA-G-expressing cancers as grade increased. Although HLA-G expression did not correlate with overall survival, there was an increase in disease-free survival for patients with HLA-G+ tumours. The HLA-G+ tumours were characteristically of a serous phenotype and showed an epithelial and/or mesenchymal phenotype. These results indicate that HLA-G expression may be involved in ovarian cancer immune escape. At the age of 12, Harold opened his first stamp shop in Littlehampton, and later opened stamp shops in other towns, including Seaford. He was a one-man encyclopedia of the hobby, and his stamp shop helped to spread the hobby across the country. By the time Child died in 1942, he had become one of the most celebrated stamp collectors in the world. A Remarkable Life Harold Child was a remarkable man, but he wasn't just a talented businessman. He was also an inventor and a great humanitarian. Harold spent his early childhood in the countryside, where he made his first model aeroplane, and went on to make boats and even a primitive catapult.
